Rural Responses to Family Violence & Sexual Assault in Aboriginal Communities

Using a Community Development Approach

25th & 26th
September
2008

LIMITED PLACES!

SHARING

Aboriginal communities have identified reducing family violence and sexual assault as a priority.

Non-Aboriginal workers are often uncertain about the most helpful ways to respond and may be hampered in responding by misconceptions about Aboriginal Communities.

This course provides an interagency forum in which to explore respectful and culturally sensitive responses to Aboriginal clients affected by family violence and sexual assault.

Date - 25th & 26th September 2008.

Time - 9:am Start. 4:30pm Finish

Venue - The Foundry Hotel Complex, 366 High St Bendigo.

CARING

Pam Greer has recently been inducted into the NSW Health Aboriginal Health Awards hall of fame, This has been awarded to Pam for her tireless work as an activist and mentor in the field of family violence in Aboriginal communities.

"as one Aboriginal woman who has seen the communities up close, I can support the call for better and more effective law enforcement but I hope that governments will do more than fund additional police resources. It is time for direct, humanitarian and humane intervention on behalf of Aboriginal women and children to save the next generations of children from certain devastation. Inaction of the past is just another form of systematic genocide."

Pam Greer, Consultant to the Australian Domestic and Family Violence clearinghouse.
