

While the solutions to these problems involve change that is both systemic and cultural, the more immediate concerns of being able to document reliably the experiences of rural victim/survivors should remain a priority. It is critical in this context also to give priority to methodologies that will respect more culturally appropriate ways of recording the experiences of Aboriginal women and women from culturally diverse and non-English-speaking backgrounds. The Personal Safety Survey, scheduled for 2005 to replicate the Women's Safety Survey of 1996, aims to more reliably account for women's experiences of physical and sexual violence in both urban and rural contexts.

Information on how rural women might differ from their urban sisters in making decisions to report to police and to seek assistance from support services, health practitioners and the courts will contribute to an important evidence base for service-providers to lobby policy-makers in the future.

Endnotes

- 1 ACSSA surveys were distributed to three services within each state and territory. Broadly, the surveys covered issues such as: the history and philosophy underpinning service frameworks; current issues relevant to sexual assault and service delivery; and the challenges associated with providing services to victim/survivors in rural communities. Surveys were generally returned from at least two of the three services approached. These ranged from specialist sexual assault services to service providers working within community health, women's health or hospital based services. ACSSA is enormously indebted to those services who participated in the research – our sincere thanks to them for their efforts in so thoughtfully reflecting on the diverse range of service issues they currently face.
- 2 ACSSA provided assurances of confidentiality in relation to attributing individual comments to services that participated. In broad terms, the services included four regional centres with population sizes in excess of 40,000 people; five regional service centres with populations between 18,000 and 30,000; and five towns or rural communities ranging from between 3,500 to 13,900 people.
- 3 See, for example, Jodie Sloane's overview of the South Australian project "The Way It Is" (Sloane 1998).
- 4 Weeks noted how employing Aboriginal workers in dedicated positions within sexual assault services usually resulted in an increase of Indigenous women accessing the service. This was also the case for women from culturally diverse backgrounds. More sustained efforts to changing the service structure tended to be multi-faceted – such as employing bi- or multi-lingual workers, developing information in a range of language groups and collaborative projects being undertaken with other community organisations that had pre-established relationships with immigrant or refugee women.
- 5 Babacan cites research by Gray et al. (1991) that suggests patterns of immigration to rural areas largely fall under three categories: family reunion, refugee and humanitarian programs and employer nominations (1999: 237).
- 6 Other limitations of the Women's Safety Survey are detailed in ACSSA Issues Paper 1, Just Keeping the Peace: A Reluctance to Respond to Male Partner Sexual Violence (Heenan 2004). However, it is particularly important to note how the survey methodology was more likely to draw participation from English-speaking, non-Indigenous women who were living in a private residence.
- 7 While the Crime and Safety Survey 2002 (ABS 2003) suggests little difference in sexual assault victimisation rates between capital cities and non-metropolitan areas, the broad categories limit the extent to which these figures are likely to reflect real incidence. The methodological approach of using postal surveys to collect the information might also impact on women's willingness to disclose sexual violence.
- 8 It is important to note that many other services that exist in rural communities are still unable to offer victims of recent sexual assault a face-to-face crisis service after hours.

9 Moreover, services are funded very differently across the various states and territories. In 2002, Wendy Weeks (2002: 7) identified 120 services providing specialist responses to sexual violence. Most of these were stand-alone services or auspiced by a non-government organisation. Other services were provided by individual workers within another organisation, such as a community health centre or hospital based service. Government-operated services made up the remainder of the service types.

References

- ABS (1996), Women's Safety Australia, Catalogue No. 4128.0, Australian Bureau of Statistics, Canberra.
- ABS (2003), Crime and Safety Australia 2002, Catalogue No. 4509.0, Australian Bureau of Statistics, Canberra.
- Allen, K-E. (2003), "The social space(s) of rural women", Rural Society, vol.12, no.1, pp. 27-44.
- Alston, M. (1997), "Violence against women in a rural context", Australian Social Work, vol. 50, no. 1, pp. 15-22.
- AIHW (1998), Health in Rural and Remote Australia, Australian Institute of Health and Welfare, Canberra.
- Babacan, H. (1999), "Do I belong here? An exploration of issues facing women of non-English-speaking background", in L. Briskman & M. Lynn with H. La Nauze (eds) Challenging Rural Practice: Human Services in Australia, Deakin University Press, Geelong, Victoria.
- Baxter, K. (1992), "Starting from scratch: Sexual assault services in rural areas", in J. Breckenridge & M. Carmody (eds) Crimes of Violence: Australian Responses to Rape and Child Sexual Assault, Allen and Unwin, Sydney.
- Campbell, J.C. (1989), "Women's responses to sexual abuse in intimate relationships", Health Care for Women International, vol. 10, pp. 335-346.
- Carcach, C. (2000a), "Regional development and crime", Trends and Issues in Crime and Criminal Justice, no. 160, Australian Institute of Criminology, Canberra.
- Carcach, C. (2000b), "Size, accessibility and crime in regional Australia", Trends and Issues in Crime and Criminal Justice, no. 175, Australian Institute of Criminology, Canberra.
- Coker, A. L., Smith, P.H., McKeown, R.E., & King, M.J. (2000), "Frequency and correlates of intimate partner violence by type: Physical, sexual, and psychological battering", American Journal of Public Health, vol. 90, no. 4, pp. 553- 559.
- Collingridge, M. (1993), "Child sexual assault protocols: An evaluation", Rural Society, vol. 3, no. 2, pp. 17-19.
- Connell, R. (2000), Gender, Polity Press, Cambridge.
- Coorey, L. (1988), "Domestic violence and the police: Who is being protected?", Master of Social Work thesis, University of Sydney, Sydney.
- Coorey, L. (1990), "Domestic violence in rural areas", in M. Alston (ed.) Rural Women: Key Papers, No. 1, Centre for Rural and Remote Research, Wagga Wagga.
- Coumarelos, C. & Allen, J. (1999), Predicting Women's Responses to Violence: The 1996 Women's Safety Survey, Crime and Justice Bulletin: Contemporary Issues in Crime and Justice, No. 47, NSW Bureau of Crime Statistics and Research, Sydney.
- Crime Research Centre (1998), Rural Crime and Safety in Western Australia, Department of Commerce and Trade, Perth.
- Crocker, D. (1996), "Innovative models for rural child protection teams", Child Abuse and Neglect, vol. 20, no. 3, pp. 205-211.
- Dempsey, K. (1992), A Man's Town: Inequality Between Women and Men in Rural Australia, Oxford University Press, Melbourne.
- Dietrich, L. & Mason, R. (1998), "There's no full-on rape here: Confronting violence against women in a country town", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 4, pp. 8-14.

- Edwards, A. (1998), "The Northern Territory domestic violence strategy: All paper, no infrastructure", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 4, pp. 46-48.
- Ermacora, J. (1998), "It's different in the country. . .", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 4, pp. 36-44.
- Ferrante, A., Morgan, F. Indermaur, D. & Harding, R. (1996), Measuring the Extent of Domestic Violence, The Hawkins Press, Sydney.
- Gibson, D., Baxter, J. & Kingston, C. (1990), "Beyond the dichotomy: The paid and unpaid work of rural women", in Alston, M. (ed.) Rural Women, Centre for Rural Social Research, Wagga Wagga.
- Goldman, R. & Goldman, D. (1988), "The prevalence and nature of child sex abuse in Australia", Australian Journal of Sex, Marriage and Family, vol. 9, no. 2, pp. 94-106.
- Gray, I. & Phillips, E. (2001), "Beyond life in 'the bush': Australian rural cultures", Rurality Bites: The Social and Environmental Transformation of Rural Australia, Pluto Press, Annandale.
- Halfacree, K. (1993), "Locality and social representation: Space, discourse and alternative definitions of the rural", Journal of Rural Studies, vol. 9, no. 1, pp. 23-37.
- Heenan, M (2004), Just Keeping the Peace: A Reluctance to Respond to Male Partner Sexual Violence, Issues Paper 1, Australian Centre for the Study of Sexual Assault, Australian Institute of Family Studies, Melbourne,. Also available at: www.aifs.gov.au/acssa/
- Hillier & Harrison (1999) "The girls in our town: Sex, love, relationships and rural life", in L. Briskman & M. Lynn with H. La Nauze (eds) Challenging Rural Practice: Human Services in Australia, Deakin University Press, Geelong, Victoria.
- Hogg, R. & Carrington, K. (1998), "Crime, rurality and community", Australian and New Zealand Journal of Criminology, vol. 31, pp. 160-181.
- Jobes, P., Barclay, E., Donnermeyer, J. & Graycar, A. (2002), "Rural crime in Australia: Contemporary concerns, recent research and future directions", Australian Journal of Regional Studies, vol. 35, no. 1, pp. 79-98.
- Kelly, S. (1989), "City folk, country folk: Demographic and attitudinal urban-rural differences", Family Matters, no. 24, pp. 43-45.
- Knowles, J. (1996), Police Culture and the Handling of Domestic Violence: An Urban/Rural Comparison, The Criminology Research Council, Canberra.
- Krug, E.G., Dahlberg, L.L., Mercy, J., Zwi, A.B. & Lozano, R. (eds) (2002), World Report on Violence and Health, World Health Organisation, Geneva.
- La Nauze, H. & Rutherford, S. (1997), "Women's work against violence: Community responses in a rural setting", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 2, pp. 14-21.
- Lievore, D. (2003), "Sexual assault in rural Australia", in Non-reporting and Hidden Recording of Sexual Assault: An International Literature Review, Commonwealth Office of the Status of Women, Barton, ACT. Also available at: www.osw.dpmc.gov.au/pdfs/sexualassault\_review\_june03.pdf
- Lockie, S. & Bourke, L. (eds) (2001), Rurality Bites: The Social and Environmental Transformation of Rural Australia, Pluto Press, Armadale.
- Lonne, R. (1990), "Beginning country practice", Australian Social Work, vol. 41, no. 1, pp. 31-39.
- Lovell, J. (1996), "Changing attitudes: Rural responses to women and domestic violence", Report of a Joint Project by the Murray Mallee Women's Health Team and the Women's Health Service.
- Lynn, M. (1990), "Rural social work: Applying Martinez-Brawley's tenets to Gippsland", Australian Social Work, vol. 43, no. 1, pp. 15-21.
- Macklin, M. (1995). "Breaching the idyll: Ideology, intimacy and social service provision in a rural community", P. Share (ed.) Communication and Culture in Rural Areas, Centre for Rural Social Research, Wagga Wagga.

- Mason, R. (2001), "Sexual assault crisis care: Making the most of rural partnerships", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 10, pp. 23-31.
- Nicholson, D. (1998), "Only a domestic . . . A rural perspective on police responses to domestic violence against women", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 4, pp. 15-24.
- O'Connor, M. & Gray, D. (1989), Crime in a Rural Community, Federation Press, Sydney.
- Partnerships Against Domestic Violence, "Supporting Rural and Remote Communities", Case Study 4, Available at www.padv.dpmc.gov.au
- Ruback, B. & Menard, K. (2001), "Rural-Urban differences in sexual victimization and reporting: Analyses using UCR and crisis centre data", Criminal Justice and Behavior, Vol. 28, No. 2, pp. 131-155.
- Sainsbury, D. (1996), Gender, Equality and Welfare States, Cambridge University Press, Cambridge.
- Samyia-Coorey, L. (1987), "The nature of continued domestic violence in country areas", Regional Journal of Social Issues, no. 21, pp. 1-18.
- Sheehan, J., Meurs, C. & Flanagan, J. (2001), "'Doing it differently': Bringing sexual assault and domestic violence together in rural Victoria", Seeking Solutions, Paper delivered at conference coordinated by the combined Women's Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Services, 5 September, Gold Coast, Queensland.
- Sloane, J. (1998), "The way it is and the way it will be: Interagency service provision in rural and remote South Australia for adults who have experienced recent rape or sexual assault", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 4, pp. 4-7.
- Stehlik, D. (2001), "The rural as urban myth: Snack foods and country life", in S. Lockie & L. Bourke (eds) Rurality Bites: The Social and Environmental Transformation of Rural Australia, Pluto Press, Annandale.
- Sturney, R. (1989), "Women and services in remote company-dominated mining towns: A report to the Department of Primary Industries and Energy, Rural Development Centre, University of New England, Armidale.
- Victorian Law Reform Commission (2003), Sexual Offences Interim Report, Victorian Law Reform Commission, Melbourne.
- Watkins, J. & Watkins, D. (1984), Social Policy and the Rural Setting, Springer, New York.
- Weeks, W. (2002), Cultural Diversity and Services Against Sexual Violence, National Association of Services Against Sexual Violence, CASA House, Melbourne.
- Weisheit, R., Wells, L. & Falcone, D. (1995), Crime and Policing in Rural and Small-Town America: An Overview of the Issues, National Institute of Justice, Washington.
- Wendt, S. & Cheers, B. (2004), "Rural cultures, domestic violence, and stories from a rural region", Women Against Violence: An Australian Feminist Journal, no. 15 (in press).
- Women's Services Network (WESNET) (2000), Domestic Violence in Regional Australia: A Literature Review, Partnerships Against Domestic Violence and Department of Transport and Regional Services, Canberra.